Rue de Lille, in the heart of the Carré des Antiquaires district. This private residence from the early 19th century is equipped with an internal elevator and a staircase designed by contemporary artist Jean-Michel Othoniel, providing access to all floors from the basement to the third floor.

Throughout the house, renovated in a decidedly modern style, there is an entryway, a study, a living room, an evening lounge, a generous living room with an impressive seven-meter-high ceiling, a dining room, a spacious equipped kitchen, and three bedrooms with bathrooms. In the basement, there is a guest bedroom with a shower, a sauna, and a laundry room. Located in an excellent place in the prestigious seventh district of the capital.
